ABOUT YOUR COMPLAINT

What happens next?

The Authority will write you a letter to confirm that it has received your complaint. It might also ask for more information.

The Authority can then conduct an independent investigation, or refer your complaint to Police for investigation and resolution. In some circumstances, such as when a complaint is minor, the Authority may decide to take no action.

How long will it take?

Some complaints are resolved within days or weeks; others that are serious and require investigation can take many months, or longer. The time taken can depend on matters outside the Authority's control, such as Court cases.

Is the complaint confidential?

The Authority is obliged by law to notify the Police about your complaint, and will ask the Police for information.

The Authority may also need to disclose information in order to investigate and resolve the complaint.

The Authority may issue a public report on its findings.

In all other respects, your complaint will remain confidential.

Why are some investigated by Police?

The Authority independently investigates the most serious complaints, for example those involving fatalities or allegations of very serious misconduct.

Other complaints are referred to the Police for investigation and resolution. Many complaints can be quickly and effectively resolved directly with the Police.

If a complaint is referred to the Police, the Authority takes steps to ensure it is properly resolved. This may include overseeing a Police investigation, or reviewing or auditing an investigation once it is completed.

ABOUT THE INDEPENDENT POLICE CONDUCT AUTHORITY

The Independent Police Conduct Authority is an independent body set up by Parliament to keep watch over the Police.

It is not part of the Police – the law require it to be fully independent. The Authority has three members and is chaired by a High Court Judge. It has its own investigators.

Being independent means that the Authority makes its own findings based on the facts and the law.

ANY QUESTIONS?

The Authority's Complaints Management Team will answer any questions or discuss any concerns you have about your complaint.
